

Kreditsearch Updates Swiss Finance Information Portal With Refreshed Loan Rate Comparisons

August 11, 2026

ZURICH, CH - August 11, 2026 -

Kreditsearch.ch, an independent Swiss information and comparison portal for loans, has updated its loan rate comparisons to reflect current market conditions across Switzerland. The refreshed data gives Swiss consumers a clearer view of available personal loan, car loan, and small loan options as interest rates continue to shift throughout the country.

The platform operates without offering loans or financial advice, instead functioning as a neutral resource where consumers can research and compare loan conditions from a range of providers. The updated comparisons cover personal loans (Privatkredit), car loans (Autokredit), quick loans, small loans, and business financing, allowing users to review options side by side before approaching any lender.

Alongside the rate updates, the portal continues to maintain its free tools, including a loan calculator and a budget calculator. These tools help users estimate their maximum affordable loan rate based on income and expenses, a step that supports more realistic loan planning. The calculators are designed to be used before submitting any loan request, reducing the likelihood of applications that do not match a borrower's financial situation.

According to Kreditsearch, the platform places particular emphasis on serving segments of the population that often find fewer resources available to them. These include self-employed individuals, retirees, foreigners, temporary workers, and people with debt collection records (Betreibung). Dedicated guides address the specific requirements and challenges these groups face when seeking financing in Switzerland.

The comparison methodology remains free of advertising influence, meaning the portal does not adjust its comparisons or educational content based on commercial arrangements with lenders. The platform provides bilingual content in German and English, broadening access for the international community living and working in Switzerland. Educational resources include a glossary, a frequently asked questions section, and downloadable checklists intended to help borrowers understand terms and prepare their documentation.

The latest Kreditsearch news also reflects the platform's expanded coverage of alternative lending, including peer-to-peer lending platform comparisons and refinancing and loan consolidation guides. This addition responds to growing interest among Swiss borrowers in options beyond traditional financing, particularly those looking to reduce costs by consolidating existing obligations.

The updated comparisons and guides are independently researched and revised on a regular basis. The portal maintains a transparent approach to how it presents loan conditions, listing interest rate ranges, requirements, and relevant considerations so that users can weigh options according to their own circumstances rather than relying on marketing claims.

Kreditsearch.ch is an independent information portal based in Zurich, Switzerland, dedicated to helping consumers understand and compare loan options available across the country. The platform provides information on various loan types, loan guides, comparison resources, and practical calculation tools. It does not act as a loan broker and does not provide financial advice. Instead, it focuses on neutral, transparent, and educational content, with particular attention to underserved segments such as the self-employed, retirees, foreigners, temporary workers, and individuals with debt collection records. The portal offers bilingual resources in German and English to serve Switzerland's diverse population.
